Historical Flashback

The course of more than 39 years of a highly successful Cypriot company

In April 1982, a shipment of 250 liters of milk arrived in the village of Alhambra, changing the face of the Cypriot dairy industry forever. The Petrou family, known for the creation of traditional dairy products, decided then to officially introduce their creations to the market under the trade name ALAMBRA, using the authentic, traditional recipes of Grandma Kakoulos.

The success of its products was so great from the very first stages, since only 6 years after its establishment, the company carried out its first halloumi export to England. In 1996, the company is forced to move to new facilities in Larnaca and in March 2009, due to increased production volume, it moves again to a state-of-the-art factory with an area of 11,000m², applying FSSC 22000 (Grade A), IFS (Higher Level) and BRC (Higher Level) standards.

In addition, based on authentic family recipes, the company proceeded to create a series of products under the brand name "GRANDMA", offering consumers a real journey through time, while at the same time it began to cover even the most demanding nutritional needs of the modern consumer, importing flavors from the global market and making them available in the local market, through the company's state-of-the-art distribution center.

Today, the company occupies a leading position in the halloumi market and employs more than 200 highly qualified people, thus maintaining more than 35% of the total production in Cyprus.
